The Art of Gambling

EUROPEAN CASINOS

Monte Carlo, 1890
Louis Collisz
Oil on canvas

This scene conveys a sense of both the popularity of roulette and the enormity of the European gambling halls of the 19th century. While gambling lore and a popular song celebrate the exploits of "the man who broke the bank at Monte Carlo," the reality is less spectacular than the legend, since a roulette "bank" in Monte Carlo consisted only of the capital on hand for a single table, not for the entire Casino.

The largest verifiable win on a single spin of a roulette wheel occurred in 1994 at Binion's Horseshoe in Las Vegas. A tuxedo-clad computer programmer from London, England, arranged to wager $220,000 on one coup. After a practice spin that landed in the zero slot, the man placed his bet on red and watched the ball drop into red seven. The "punter" collected his winnings and left.

MOVE INTO 4 ROULETTE

With MULTIFORTUNE, the game's not just twice as enjoyable or twice as exciting, and doesn't even pay out twice the prize money... because with this game, everything is FOUR times better!
